THE BEST
THREE TAKES ON A CLASSIC

The antler chandelier is a fixture that's long found its place in high-country home design. And like all good things traditional, it begs to be reinterpreted. Here are three brilliant renditions of the old favorite, each sure to make its own unique statement in your mountain home:

1. GLAM GLASS Made of mouthblown sculpted glass (you can opt for clear, amber, black or opalescent), this contemporary take by artist Nicole Davis is as much artwork as it is practical light fixture. scenicmesa.com JULY 2009

2. BOLD COLOR Taking a dramatic departure from its antler ancestor, this colorful composition by The Future Perfect is as unexpected as it is sophisticated. It's ideal for adding a dose of drama to a foyer or dining space. thefutureperfect.com JANUARY 2009

3. NATURAL BEAUTY Acknowledging that twigs and antlers share a similar organic shape, this rustic beauty—made from a tangle of natural branches—is a true expression of the outdoors brought in. OCTOBER 2008 ●
